Link Rot

- Zittrain, Lessig, Albert 2014 study found that 50% of links in US Supreme Court website were broken
- They also looked at a selection of legal journals 1999-2011 and found that 70% of the links no longer functioned as intended.
- A 2013 study in BMC Bioinformatics analysed 15k links in abstracts in Web of Science and found median lifespan of web pages was 9 years and 62%.
- In 2015 Weblock analysed 180k references in full-text corpora of three open-access publishers and found 24% of the links were not available.

PERMA: SCOPING AND ADDRESSING THE PROBLEM OF LINK AND REFERENCE ROT IN LEGAL CITATIONS

Jonathan Zittrain, Kendra Albert, and Lawrence Lessig[*]

INTRODUCTION

Works of scholarship have long cited primary sources or academic works to provide sources for facts, to incorporate previous scholarship, and to bolster arguments. The ideal citation connects an interested reader to what the author references, making it easy to track down, verify, and learn more from the indicated sources.

In principle, as cited sources move to the Web, this linking should become easier. Rather than requiring a reader to travel to a library to follow the sources cited by an author, the reader should be able to retrieve the cited material immediately with a single click.

But again, only in principle. The link, a URL, points to a resource hosted by a third party. That resource will only survive so as long as the third party preserves it. And as websites evolve, not all third parties will have a sufficient interest in preserving the links that provide backwards compatibility to those who relied upon those links. The author of the cited source may decide the argument in the source was mistaken and take it down. The website owner may decide to abandon one mode of organizing material for another. Or the organization providing the source material may change its views and "update" the

Lots Of Copies Keep Stuff Safe

The LOCKSS Program, based at Stanford University Libraries, provides libraries and publishers with award-winning, low-cost, open source digital preservation tools to preserve and provide access to persistent and authoritative digital content.

LIBRARIES KEEP WHAT THEY BUY.

Librarians need to know that the digital content they acquire today will not disappear when they cancel subscriptions, and that their electronic collections can be preserved and accessed by readers far into the future.

PUBLISHERS PRESERVE WHAT THEY PUBLISH.

Publishers need to know that the integrity of their web-based content will remain unchanged and available in perpetuity—even if their own website is no longer available.

3/2017

You may already know the story of LOCKSS' beginnings (PDF).

On a fall day in 1999, a hike in the woods became the backdrop for a spontaneous problem-solving session on

CHAPTER ONE
EARLY INFLUENCES
My earliest memory is of sitting on the back steps of a square little house, Beechurst, in Love Lane, Pontefract. I must have been three years old at the time and I was looking out at a stretch of unkempt grass surrounded by a brick wall which we called a garden. On re-visiting the house many years later I found it was a very modest home, but to me it represented solidity and security. Beyond our wall was a cinder track which separated us from a terraced row of houses occupied mainly by miners from the surrounding pits. I remember them because we used to play with the miners' children, learning some colourful language from them. My mother used to recount how I came in one day from a rough and tumble on the cinder track and, pointing to my elder brother, Jimmie, lisped:
"Look at icka Dimmy. Isn't he a mucky little buggar."
13/03/2009
At this stage my mother was the dominant influence in my life.
She was a William Morris Socialist; waliness must be turned

PARADIGM

Welcome to paradigm

The Personal Archives Accessible in Digital Media (paradigm) project saw the major research libraries of the Universities of Oxford and Manchester come together to explore the issues involved in preserving digital private papers through gaining practical experience in accessioning and ingesting digital private papers into digital repositories, and processing these in line with archival and digital preservation requirements.

The project was funded between 2005 and 2007, under the JISC's programme "Supporting Institutional Digital Preservation and Asset Management".

Project outcomes

The project outcomes included:

- A template for ensuring long-term access for institutional holdings of digital personal papers
- Best-practice guidelines in the form of a workbook on issues relating to the archiving of personal papers in digital form, made available in sections as they are completed
- Strengthened local institutional capacity for digital preservation
- Developed templates for institutional policies for collection development, retention, and disposal
- Practical test of digital repository softwares DSpace and Fedora and related tools
- Research resources for 20th century political history in the form of new archival collections

Visit the About section to find out more.

futureArch

Building on Paradigm
futureArch is a major project to develop production-level services for hybrid archives at the Bodleian. The project has a blog for those interested in the work.

The Paradigm Workbook is now available in hard copy - please contact susa...@bodley.ox.ac.uk to request a free copy.

Paradigm nominated for The 2007 Conservation Awards - Digital Preservation Award - the Paradigm project is among five international projects short-listed for the award, which is sponsored by the Digital Preservation Coalition. The winners of the Conservation Awards 2007 will be announced at the British Museum on 27 September.

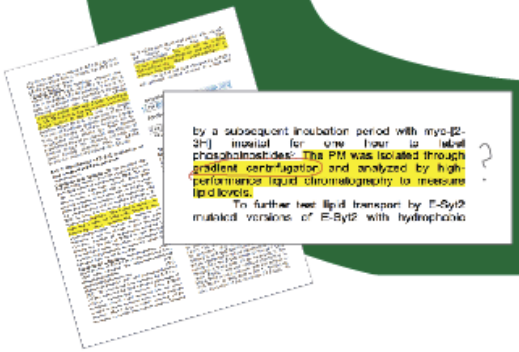
1. Identify key conclusions from the paper and a subset of data from the paper to be replicated

2. Obtain the materials and methods from the key figures of the paper and annotate them to determine the holes in the protocols that would influence the success of replication



3. Contact laboratories to get them to fill in the holes. This often involves searching through old research notebooks, connecting with study authors that have since moved on, and interfacing with collaborators.

4. Compile obtained information into organized registered report that is published at eLife and undergoes a review process, open to commentary from study authors.

5. Perform experiments, in vitro and in vivo, according to protocol from registered report.

6. Publish findings in an open access Replication Study

Organisational Records

- Archives for institutions like universities and other large-scale administrative structures have relied on process to organise and appraise records for a long time.
- Electronic records management in place in some but not all organisations to support this process.
- Driver for preservation is mostly legal and evidential, partly historical.
- Some organisations see benefit in having historical material for advertising.

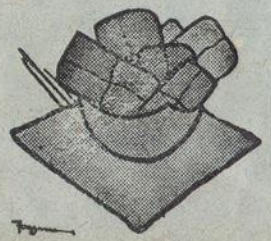
OXFORD RELIEF is entrusted to Friends Relief Service whose voluntary workers* act with care, economy and a personal touch regardless of frontiers, race, politics, class or creed. Many countries have benefited and now the peoples of Austria, Poland and the British Zone of Germany are getting most attention. F.R.S. personnel is less than 40% Quaker, 20% C. of E., many Free Church etc., and some Roman Catholics; united in service.

WE THANK ALL WHO HAVE helped us raise £20,000 in 14 months, plus clothing, etc., worth £10,000, in six months, for European Relief.



Gifts as below will be welcome

(if no local body now collecting for Europe):—
MONEY FOR FOOD, MEDICAL SUPPLIES, Etc., for children, the aged, and special cases. (This does not reduce our rations.) Please make cheques payable to "Gradely Relief," cross and post to Barclays Old Bank, High Street, Oxford. Sir Alan Pim will acknowledge.

CLOTHING, FOOTWEAR, UNIFORMS, TOWELS, BEDDING BLACKOUTS, MENDING MATERIALS, Etc. (including clean, mendable articles for repair by Displaced Persons sadly needing work), to:—"Gradely," 42, Hythe Bridge Street, Oxford. Lady Franks will acknowledge (if address supplied).

How do we know we are succeeding?

- Standards:
  - ISO16363:2012
  - European Framework for Audit and Certification for Digital Repositories
  - Data Seal of Approval
    - Unified Requirements for Core Certification of Trustworthy Digital Repository
      - Content Preservation
      - Integrity and Authenticity
      - IPR and Regulatory constraints
      - Expert guidance
      - Technical infrastructure
      - Security

Knowing ourselves

- Polonsky Digital Preservation at Oxford and Cambridge
  - 6 DP Fellows: Technical, Policy & Planning, Outreach and Training.
  - Work collaboratively as a distributed team.
  - Each institution has its own Project Team
  - Join Project Team
  - Collaborative with the Digital Preservation Coalition
- Aim to build capacity, knowledge and momentum in DP.

Knowing ourselves

- Staff survey at Bodleian shows 80% of staff regard digital preservation as being of equal value as physical preservation
- But we also found a lack of knowledge about DP terms and concepts.
- We will be adding basic DP to all staff induction courses
- As well as tailored training for specific groups of staff.

Knowing ourselves

- Bodleian Digital Image Audit
  - 129 million image files from Google Books project PLUS
  - 5.8 million in-house generated image files (on tape) OF WHICH
    - 2.4 million currently available online via a Bodleian website.
  - Found locations and management regimes of all digital image collections (WE HOPE)
- Spread across multiple and aging web applications and tape storage.
- Undergoing a process of rationalising web sites
- Reengineering workflows to ensure DP
- Writing detailed data management plans

We are building:

- A political and institutional climate responsive to the need for digital preservation
- Competent and responsive workforces ready to address the challenges of digital preservation
- Better tools, smarter processes and enhanced capacity in digital preservation
- Closer and more productive collaboration within and beyond the Coalition

Digital Preservation Handbook

The Handbook aims to identify good practice in creating, managing and preserving digital materials. By providing a strategic overview of the key issues, discussion and guidance on strategies and activities, and pointers to key projects and reports, the Handbook aims to provide guidance for institutions and individuals and a range of tools to help them identify and take appropriate actions.

Always verify your references, sir !

Quotes [edit]

- I think sir, since you care for the advice of an old man, sir, you will find it a very good practise, always to verify your references, sir!
  - Advice given to Dean John William Burgon, (29 November 1847), in response to the question: "Every studious man, in the course of a long and thoughtful life, has had occasion to experience the special value of some one axiom or precept. Would you mind giving me the benefit of such a word of advice?"; quoted in Lives of twelve good men, by John William Burgon, 1888, vol. 1 p. 73.
- It will lead to nothing, I fear, sir
  - Remarked to William Palmer, on the eve of his 1840-1 journey to Russia to improve Anglican-Orthodox relations. The trip reaped little success; quoted in Notes of a Visit to the Russian Church in the Years 1840, 1841, by William Palmer, 1882, p. 10.
- But I know, my friends, that you may object to me what St. Irenaeus says.
  - Said to his congregation after an exposition of his own theology; quoted in Essays and addresses, Herbert McLachlan, Manchester University Press, 1954, p. 354
- Wait, sir, until I am gone!
  - Standard reply to people proposing changes in the running of Oxford University; quoted in Colin Gordon, Beyond the Looking Glass (1982), p. 37
